The Inside Scoop

Welcome to your June issue of IYB!

It was a pleasure to host thirteen individuals for the most recent Raising the Board Class (RtB). RtB is a unique-to-the-Central PA Chamber training program for current and prospective non-profit board members. Several years ago, I was recruited to join the board of an organization I was passionate about but had no formal training to know how best to serve. You've probably had a similar experience as some point in time, haven't you?

Fortunately, the Central PA Chamber has developed Raising the Board to fill the void, and now nearly 100 unique individuals are serving non-profit organizations across our region. There will be one more opportunity to join a RtB class in 2025: October 8th. As a graduate myself, I can assure you the value of taking the course. Please sign-up at www.centralpachamber.com/events

I look forward to seeing you at our upcoming summer events, especially the golf tournament! Let us pray for favorable temperatures, winds, and rains.

Enjoy reading about our presenter, Caz Russell, a noted author and communication coach, who will lead two Seminar & Training events this summer. You'll also find updates on our strategic planning survey, and more!

Happy reading!

MILTON — The art of communication isn't really about eloquence or using big words, according to Caz Russell. He will be diving into the real meaning of effective, respectful communication during his upcoming seminar and training series, "The Art of Communication."

Slated for 9 to 11 a.m. Wednesday, June 11, Russell's seminar will be held at the Central PA Chamber of Commerce, located at 30 Lawton Lane, Milton. Registration for the event closes June 9.

Russell started what he calls his "second career" about 10 years ago after retiring from 37 years of work in the electric industry.

"I wanted to be a leadership speaker, which means helping others and myself to learn leadership principles to be successful in life. I sought out leadership gurus to learn from," Russell said.

LEADERSHIP DEVELOPMENT FACILITATOR

He started reading books on leadership principles, listening to podcasts, and watching YouTube videos, and he eventually came across the John Maxwell Leadership Academy.

Now as a John Maxwell certified coach, teacher, trainer and speaker, Russell offers various workshops on leadership, communication, decision making, error prevention, and creating a new safety culture. To Russell, leadership is the umbrella, and under that, people learn how to be good team players and how to effectively communicate.

"Leadership is a choice. Do we live our lives, or do we lead our lives? We can determine where we end up instead of living with the circumstances thrown at us," Russell said.

He also believes leadership is about relationships, and in any healthy relationship, communication is key.

"Communication is about how we connect with people, how we capture their attention, and keep their attention. My goal in life is to help others increase their communication skills," said Russell.

During his upcoming workshop, Russell will explore different aspects of good communication, which go well beyond words.

"What is my posture like, my attitude? Do I ask questions? It's not about me just giving communication, but how do I receive communication?" he noted.

Russell's workshops vary in length and can be tailored to address the needs of the group.

Recent Raising the Board Graduates:

Thirteen new participants graduated from the Central PA Chamber's "Raising the Board" training program on Wednesday, May 21. Members of non-profit boards from across the region were represented at the day-long training, including Stacey Rearick of 4 Paws Sake, who stated she would "take the class again, just to learn from the experience."

Attendees were treated to a catered lunch, generously provided by McAlister's Deli and leave with their class materials, contact information, and other resources for future reference and continued learning.

"Ah Ha" Moments!

Recently I read an article titled "When You're Juggling All the Things" and it really got my thinking about YOU our members and the benefits YOU have available to YOU by way of your membership with the Central PA Chamber.

Jessica teaches a great seminar "What is the Central PA Chamber" at least each quarter annually and is willing to do it independently of the public seminar dates too if that works better for those interested in attending.

Those who have attended have had several "ah ha" moments and were excited to have several new solutions to various needs.

At any given time, leaders of businesses and non-profit organizations are juggling meetings, welcoming new staff/volunteers, mid-year planning, reviewing goals, reworking budgets, reviewing policies, handling scheduling issues, writing strategic plans, planning employee luncheons, networking with current and prospective clients/donors and so much more left unsaid.

Sometimes it may feel as if you are constantly putting out fires (not literally of course) and in a state of constant triage.

The article I read referred to an analogy of juggling balls in the air. Simply put the author said, "some of the balls we juggle are plastic, and some are glass." She said that some things, no matter how busy you are, can't be dropped. They are glass balls. She also explained no matter how organized you are unexpected things pop into your already full calendar, and you then pause something you enjoy and cancel personal plans to work longer hours; but she wanted to give herself and the readers permission slip to take a moment and look at what they're juggling. What's glass and what's plastic? What can bounce in the background while you hold what must be held carefully?

My thought was she must not belong to the Central PA Chamber of Commerce as they are incredibly great at offering assistance in finding solutions for those items that you surely don't want to let bounce in the background as YOU have membership benefits to do that right!!

How good are your juggling skills anyways? Are you dropping the plastic balls and what about those glass ones?

Have you reached out to YOUR Chamber team to see what solutions they maybe able to help you find to your juggling mishaps so that YOU don't have to work longer hours and miss out on those things that YOU enjoy?

When is the last time YOU viewed YOUR Chamber website and membership benefits and opportunities guide? So much available for YOU to make use of. Don't try to keep juggling, let us help.

HRG, Bentley Systems to Implement Digital Twin Software for Water Systems throughout the Mid-Atlantic U.S.

Melissa Rohland joins HRG as the firm's liaison to Bentley and other software companies

Herbert, Rowland & Grubic, Inc. (HRG) has partnered with global infrastructure engineering software company, Bentley Systems, Incorporated, to implement Bentley's OpenFlows WaterSight across the mid-Atlantic region in the U.S. HRG will help utilities configure a digital twin of their water systems that can be used to optimize operations and make better long-term capital planning decisions. A proof-of-concept project is currently underway between HRG, Bentley, and Freeland Municipal Authority in Luzerne County, PA.

The Bentley software brings SCADA, GIS, hydraulic modeling, and operations data into a connected environment to get a comprehensive view of how the water system is performing, assess the risk of asset failure, and test design assumptions. A properly configured digital twin can help utilities reduce non-revenue water, improve energy efficiency, ensure water quality, and enhance customer service.

By working with HRG and Bentley Systems, utilities benefit from HRG's comprehensive knowledge of water system design and operation coupled with Bentley's four decades of software expertise in the design, build, and operation of major infrastructure projects.

HRG's Chief Innovation & Technology Officer Mike Smetana said, "Our mission is to help communities make smart decisions about infrastructure that increase efficiency, sustainability, and quality of life, and technology plays a vital role in making those decisions. We want to help our clients integrate technology into their processes for long-term success, and Bentley is an ideal partner, thanks to their comprehensive suite of software solutions for the design, construction, and management of infrastructure. While this initial alliance is focused on water systems, the potential exists for similar partnerships to serve other clients and industries, as well."

In addition, Melissa Rohland joined HRG as director of Strategic Programs, where she will serve as a liaison between HRG's internal project delivery teams and software providers like Bentley. Rohland began her career as a civil engineer designing water systems and transitioned into digital solutions for the design and construction industry with 12 years of experience in digital construction and project management. Before joining HRG, Roland was the senior director of operations at Topcon Positioning Systems, helping clients implement the best processes and technology to optimize construction operations. She holds both a B.S. in Civil Engineering and an MBA from Lehigh University. She is a licensed Professional Engineer in Pennsylvania and holds multiple technology-oriented certifications including Disciplined Agile Scrum Master (DASM) and Project Management Professional (PMP).

Smart Skin-Sun Care: Tips for Preventing and Detecting Skin Cancer

With over 5 million cases diagnosed each year in the United States alone, understanding how to prevent and detect skin cancer early is paramount. May is Skin Cancer Awareness Month, which provides all of us with the reminders we need as we jump into summer.

Sun Protection: This is the cornerstone of skin cancer prevention. This includes wearing broad-spectrum sunscreen with an SPF of 30 or higher and wearing protective clothing, such as wide-brimmed hats and sunglasses. Remember to reapply every two hours, especially after swimming.

Regular Skin Checks: Regular self-examinations and professional skin screenings are crucial for detecting skin cancer early. Dr. Haque recommends performing monthly self-checks to monitor for any changes in moles, spots, or lesions. Additionally, scheduling annual skin exams with a dermatology specialist can help detect any suspicious growths early on.

Know Your ABCDEs: Understanding the ABCDEs of melanoma can aid in identifying potentially cancerous moles. Watch for asymmetry, irregular borders, variations in color, diameters larger than a pencil eraser, and evolving moles. Any changes should prompt a visit to a dermatologist for further evaluation.

Avoid Tanning Beds: Dr. Haque strongly advises against the use of tanning beds, as they emit harmful UV radiation that increases the risk of skin cancer. Opting for sunless tanning products or bronzing lotions as safer alternatives can help achieve a sun-kissed glow without the risk.

Stay Hydrated: Keeping the skin well-hydrated is essential for maintaining its health and resilience. Drink plenty of water and use moisturizers to prevent dryness, especially in areas prone to sun exposure.

Area Agriculture Teacher C

Danville resident Van Wagner has achieved something unprecedented.

recently completed a mission to climb the highest tree on the highest mountain in each of the Commonwealth's 67 counties to bring awareness to our state's working forests—forestlands that are sustainably managed to provide a renewable supply of materials for wood products.

What started out as a personal challenge in January 2023 transformed into a mission that elevated forest education throughout the state. His journey began in Montour County when he climbed the tallest tree at the highest point on Montour Ridge—a mountain where he was born and raised and currently resides with his wife, Tamara. Following the climb, it occurred to him that no one had likely ever done this before.

“From there I thought about what a great challenge it would be to do the same thing in every county in Pennsylvania,” says Wagner. “I wanted my efforts to put the focus on Pennsylvania's trees and forests.”

And that it did. His mission captured the attention of hundreds of media outlets including the Philadelphia Inquirer.

“Our forests are treasures that need to be celebrated,” says Wagner, “But they also need to be managed. All Pennsylvanians play a role in this conversation about how best to manage our forests.”

As the only state in the nation named for its forest, Pennsylvania is the number one producer and exporter of hardwoods. The state's forest products industry represents the largest sector of agriculture as it has a $39 billion economic impact on the Commonwealth's economy. The industry also employs over 60,000 Pennsylvanians.

Despite the sector's profound impact, sometimes the industry receives a bad rap. “For some, the concept of working forests is difficult to understand,” says Stephanie Phillips-Taggart, executive director of Keystone Wood Products Association, a non-profit hardwood utilization group. “Often times people view harvesting in ill light, but when it is done sustainably, it actually increases forest health.”

She explained that the industry has advanced since the clear-cut days of the 1900's.

“So much has changed, but one thing remains the same. Trees do not live forever. One of two things happen—a tree can be harvested, or it can be left to die and decay in the woods, which releases stored carbon back into the air,” says Phillips-Taggart. “If a tree is harvested and transformed into a beautiful wood product, the product stores the carbon for its life.”

According to Phillips-Taggart, harvesting trees decreases competition for soil nutrients and opens up the forest canopy, which offers smaller trees more sunlight. This allows younger trees—which are more efficient at sequestering carbon—an opportunity to thrive.

“Forests with diverse age classes are better able to withstand disease and pest outbreaks,” she added. “Increased forest health improves carbon sequestration and storage—ultimately helping our environment.”

According to experts, wood products also use lower amounts of energy to produce. “Working forests are a win,” says Phillips-Taggart.

“When a tree is harvested every part of it is used.”

She noted that sawdust can serve as animal bedding or to produce heating pellets. Slash—treetops-- act as natural fencing to deter deer from browsing on seedlings. Small logs can be used for pulp for paper and packaging. Low- and high-grade lumber can be transformed into durable and healthy wood products.

Marc Lewis, co-owner of Dwight Lewis Lumber Products, Hills-grove, PA believes Wagner's efforts help share this message. “Van's journey helped bring awareness to the benefits of working forests,” says Lewis who accompanied Van on numerous climbs along with his dog Sylva. “His journey has been amazing to watch. I admire his dedication to the forest products industry.”

Wagner's journey was not an easy one. He braved rough terrain, subzero temperatures, heatwaves, high winds and even moments that made his heart stop. He recounted a laughable encounter with a briar bush. “I climbed on a commercial property that was loud due to well activity. Upon entering the area, I had been warned about the resident rattlesnakes,” explained Wagner. “As I started my climb, I bent down into a briar bush, but my first thought was that it was a rattlesnake.”

Each location created memories for the 48-year-old. The highlight may have been his climb at Blue Knob State Park, when the Department of Agriculture Secretary Russell Redding strapped on climbing gear to join Wagner in his efforts to elevate the forest products industry. “It was an honor. Secretary Redding did fantastic,” says Wagner, “Climbing takes a lot of strength and he breezed through the climb.”

To make these moments possible, Wagner first meticulously plotted the state's highest points and gained permission to climb lands owned by a variety of entities—including landowners. “Many of the trees were on private lands,” says Wagner. “Can you believe not one landowner denied me access? That speaks volumes for Pennsylvanians.”

Wagner's family, including his wife and their sons Luke and Calvin supported him along the way. In addition to Lewis, Wagner's college friend, Bryan Pearson also joined him on a number of climbs.

His last climb fittingly ended at Mt. Davis, the highest point in the state. He was joined by Lewis, Pearson, the Department of Conservation and Natural Resources (DCNR) State Forester, Seth Cassell and DCNR Assistant State Forester, Matt Keefer and Phillips-Taggart, among others. His journey concluded in a Big Toothed Aspen tree—a tie between the Eastern Hemlock and the Black Gum tree. He dedicated the climb to a man who escaped enslavement in the south and made a living from the surrounding forest by making tar in the 1800's. “His name is lost to history, but his story will always be remembered,” says Wagner. Wagner's journey will too be remembered as an important part of forest history.

Wagner concluded, “It is my hope that my climbing efforts have inspired people to get involved with forestry in our state.”

Wagner was recently named the solo artist from the PA Central Pennsylvania Music Hall of Fame and the 2025 Penn State University's Ecosystem Management's Outstanding Alumni.

Skin Care (ctd.)

You are not protected in your car: While the windows in your car are effective at blocking UVB radiation, which causes sunburns and skin cancer, they are not very effective at blocking UVA radiation, which also contributes to skin cancer as well as photo aging (e.g., wrinkles, leathery skin). Therefore, you should wear sunscreen if you are in the car (as well as trains and planes), particularly on your face and the back of your hands.

UV radiation scatters: Surfaces reflect UV radiation, so you are still exposed in the shade. For example, fresh snow can reflect 80% of UV radiation, dry beach sand 15%, and seafoam 25%. The best way to protect yourself while outside is to reapply sunscreen every two hours. Another great option is to wear ultraviolet protection factor (UPF) 50+ clothing, which blocks 98% of UV radiation. UPF clothing is widely available and is made from tightly woven synthetic fibers, such as polyester or nylon. Natural fibers, such as cotton or linen, are too loosely woven to be good protection from UV radiation.

By incorporating these expert tips into your skincare routine, you can take proactive steps towards reducing your risk of skin cancer and maintaining healthy, radiant skin. Remember, prevention and early detection are key in the fight against skin cancer, so prioritize sun protection and regular skin checks for optimal skin health.

You Have the Right to Refer and Be Referred!

Did you know the Central PA Chamber of Commerce sends hundreds of referrals to our members every year? Do you know what to do with those referrals once you receive them?

A bigger question may be, do you know where those referrals are being sent? Let me help you understand these questions and more!

In 2024 the Central PA Chamber sent out nearly 750 referrals to our members! So far in 2025 we have 400 referrals to our members! The Central PA Chamber has a unique referral system. We use our Membership Directory to send these referrals and only refer Chamber members.

How this system works is simple. Once we receive a need for a referral, we go to the membership directory on the website. We select the category that the person or business is looking for. Every member that is in that category that provides the service needed receives the referral. That's right, we refer every member business that fits that category need!

Once we send that referral out, it is up to the member business to make the connection and secure the sale!

This brings us to the next crucial step in what do with a referral. The system we use is an email-based system. The person within your organization that receives these referrals is the person you have set up as your primary contact for your Central PA Chamber of Commerce membership. They will receive the email with the contact information for the person/business needing the referral.

If you are not sure who your Primary Contact is be sure to reach out to the staff at the Chamber or simply go to your Directory listing on the website and see who is listed. If you need to make any changes to this, please contact me!

A couple things to remember, we track the referrals made. If at anytime you want to know details on a referral we sent you, all you have to do is ask! Also, anyone can make referrals via the website, it is not just the Chamber staff that have access to this. Remember that when you have family or friends that are looking for a service or product you can always send them to the Chamber website!

I look forward to sending you referrals this year and beyond and helping you explore all the benefits of your Chamber membership!
